Wealth management in China – moving to the next level

- What's the opportunity that growing wealth in China represents to you?
- How are the different business models evolving in the onshore wealth management market?
- What are the services that a Chinese private bank offers?
- Only around 30 percent of potential private banking clients are serviced by a bank – so how will we find them and engage them?
- Why would a client use a local private bank?
- Why would a client use a foreign bank?
- Are there any real family offices in China? What do they do? What are their needs?
- To what extent is the market becoming more professional?
- It looks good for big foreign banks to talk about their commitment to China - but what can they actually do?
- What does digital mean in Chinese wealth management?
- How can we find the right talent? And grow it?
- What's the role that Hong Kong and Singapore will play in future access to China's wealth?

Developing an investment process and philosophy

- What are the biggest opportunities and challenges for the asset management industry in China?
- How will clients increasingly diversify their portfolios?
- What products are Chinese investors looking for to create this diversification?

- Are clients interested in foreign funds?
- What's the role of private equity?
- Is there an appetite for hedge funds?
- There is still a product-pushing mentality in China, and a lot of local investors are still very self-directed in terms of where, what and how to invest – how can we change that?
- What can we do to better educate customers and improve the levels of service and overall client experience?
- How do Chinese clients think about risk? Do they manage it appropriately?

Overview and trends in China's private wealth market for 2017

Xin Liu
Principal
Bain & Company

According to a joint report from China Merchants Bank and Bain & Company, total personal wealth in China reached RMB 165 trillion in 2016, an increase of almost 50 per cent over two years ago as the world's most populous nation continues to churn out new cohorts of young, sophisticated and tech-savvy high-net-worth individuals (HNWIs). A notable finding is the significant change in priorities among China's HNWIs over the past decade whereby there is a perceptible shift away from wealth accumulation to an emphasis on wealth preservation and inheritance. What are the opportunities arising from China's growing HNWI population and wealth? What sectors are likely to benefit the most from the strong momentum of wealth creation in China?

- Overview and trends in China's private wealth market for 2017
- Chinese HNWIs investment mentality, behaviour and segmentation
- Review, outlook and implications of China's private wealth market

15.30pm

Presentation

How Can Overseas Trusts Protect Wealth for HNWIs and Entrepreneurs?

Ernest Zheng
Managing Director, China
Vistra

- Setting up a family trust for your overseas assets before investment or immigration can protect your wealth with intergenerational inheritance.
- Settling pre-IPO shares into a trust is not only a solution of family wealth protection but also that of employee benefit scheme for entrepreneurs.
- Have overseas trusts been useless under CRS?
