Technology investing in the post covid-19 world

3.00pm	Technology investing in the post covid-19 world

- In the global equity markets, where are the opportunities today in technology investment, and what are the key trends ahead?
- What are the broad regional trends, and will we see major Asian, especially Chinese, tech giants rise to challenge the supremacy of the US Big Techs?
- Stock picking is one route in for private investors, but what about the numerous successful active funds managed by experts, and the rising tide of ETFs?
- What about the rising number of smart beta ETFs, designed to give investors a refined access to tech sector opportunities, especially in markets such as China, where there are many companies outside the giants that are perhaps not so well researched or well known?
- How can investors play the global technological evolution across a variety of industry sectors, for example green energy, electric vehicles, medical/pharma/biotech, so on and so forth?
- What about the private markets route, is that the best avenue through which to access technology opportunities at an earlier stage?
- And how does the wealth management industry in Asia position itself to take advantage of these remarkable opportunities?
